

Meeting of Minds at The Mind Body Practice

Workshop with Dr Gwen Adshead

Things of darkness: understanding homicide

Saturday, 28th November 2015- Registration & Coffee – 9.45am

Workshop: 10am – 12am

In this talk, Dr Gwen Adshead will discuss different kinds of human violence; especially the offence of homicide. She will discuss this from an ecological perspective, based on evidence ranging from a world public health perspective to the individual accounts of people who have killed.

She will argue that homicide is not natural or inevitable in human societies; but rather is a complex human event, composed of several risk factors operating together. She will conclude with some discussion of homicide from the perspective of the perpetrator.

THE
MIND BODY
PRACTICE

Dr Gwen Adshead is a forensic psychiatrist, group analyst and mindfulness based cognitive therapist. She has a Master's Degree in Medical Law & Ethics and is a Fellow of the Royal College of Psychiatrists. She has worked in forensic services for over 20 years; mainly in Broadmoor high secure hospital, and more recently in a medium secure service. She has a long standing interest in attachment theory applied to forensic practice, and in moral reasoning in antisocial people.

VENUE: The Mind Body Practice
38 Devonshire Street
London W1 6QB
www.themindbodypractice.com

Cost: £25.00

To reserve a place please email info@themindbodypractice.com or call Maite Berndes on 0207 859 4938